

1. Explain what moral standing is.

For an entity to have moral standing, its interest and well-being must be considered when deciding what to do.

2. Is there a connection between moral standing and sustainable development? Explain.

Yes it is. Based on the Brundtland's statement, "sustainable development is development that meets the needs of the present without compromising the ability off future generations to meet their needs". So, the moral standing will help entity to consider about the future generation when they decide something relate to the sustainable development.

3. Do you consider future generations when deciding what is right to do? Give an example [if you do or if you don't].

Yes. As an easy example, I am living in Ottawa. So, I obey all of instructions on how to separate the rubbish. I decide to follow instructions as I know I can help them to recycle things to prevent from pollution because if I do not do as they said, the next generation will suffer from this pollution.
